OBJECTIVES OF ORIENTATION SCHOOL PROGRAMME

Orientation school programme is an early exposure of the teacher student to the school environment from the perspective of a teacher. The main objective of this programme is to provide opportunities for teacher students to understand the school as an educational institute in a bigger picture and the role of teachers in the classroom. This could be done through observation, reflection and interaction with senior teachers and colleagues, and school management to integrate theory and practice in the context of teaching learning.

Orientation school programme are aiming for five objectives and through this, teacher students should be able to;

1. Understand the school environment and community.
2. Adapt to the school ad classroom.
3. Build skills to gather information on school management and culture in school.
4. Integrating theory with classroom management practices through observation in the context teaching and learning.
5. Record the experiences experienced in the portfolio to foster creative and reflective thinking culture.

CRITICAL REFLECTION

Students are required to watch a video of an interview session with SMK Bukit Jelutong in completing this assignment. The video is handled by the principal, the headmistresses of administration and academic, students' affair and curriculum and teacher students from UPSI. In the video, they explain and share their experiences on being senior teachers and leave us with great advices that can help us with our posting as teacher students. Once we are done with the video, students should be able to write a critical reflection regarding of the video.

The content of the video is undeniably enlightens my views and thoughts of being a teacher in general or an English teacher, to be more specific. Previously, I believe teacher as a career is like playing safe because you work with government, your bonus and retirement are promised, have long holidays and have fixed work hours like 7 a.m. till 2 p.m. and that is it. But, clearly I was wrong. There are few things that I would like to highlight because it is just stuck in my mind. Firstly, when you at your practicum school, your subjects will be decided by school and the school also will decide what extra subjects that you can teach. Even if I have zero knowledge on that particular subject that I might have to teach, I have to take it as my responsibilities because I am a teacher. My job is to educate students regardless of my major. In short, make the best out of any challenges and tasks that I might get as a future teacher students because in the end, it is all about a learning process.

Secondly, be a fun, enthusiastic and creative English teacher. English classes are supposed to be full of energy, eager to learn new knowledge and participate in the learning process. For that, I believe being a well-rounded English teacher can boost students' confidence to participate more in the classroom which also enhances their proficiency level. It is also said that teaching English is fun but also challenging. English subject is all about language and utilizing the language in our daily life. It is more than just the language solely because you incorporate moral values and skills in teaching and learning process. Thus, it is up to me on how I can make English class interesting with new exposure but at the same time, instil great skills and values in students.

Lastly, it is crucial to know and understand your students but one must also know the limits. I always believe in being sincere in any matters, either do your duties or dealing with peoples. There are tons of ways in getting to know students; I can start maybe by their family backgrounds, cultures, socioeconomic background, interest and many more. When I want to know students, it is not meant to be a plain knowing them. I personally want to open students' mind, touch their hearts, guide them to the right paths and change lives. Maybe I can't do it in bigger concept but I would love to try my best to bring the best out of my students and let them shape their personality in becoming a better person that they can be proud of. That is my goal of getting to know students.

How does this knowledge assist you in becoming effective teacher?

All the knowledge that I gained from this video definitely are beneficial and show me the light of where am I heading to from this course. Previously, I have no strong desire to be a teacher because never once I take myself as a person that can educate people let alone change their lives. However, this video really helps me out with this. First, it gives me a clear image of what is an effective teacher. Second, I start searching for what it takes to be a good teacher in 21st century education now. For instance, I searched for the roles of being a teacher and turns out it is not to teach but it has 13 roles of being a teacher. Such as the adapter, the counsellor, the risk taker and etc. From that, I understand that it is not necessarily to be solely on teaching but what important is how you use your role as a teacher and make the best out of it for your students. Third, take obstacles as challenges and learn from it. Finally, being a teacher meaning that I portray good examples to students and be true to my words.

My plan of action in becoming an effective teacher

My plan in becoming an effective teacher is first, understand the roles of teacher. Which roles that I believe match with my personalities and I truly can carry it out. I also must understand when or where I should use those certain roles because in classroom only, one teacher can multitask with different roles in one time. Next, I have to start shape and mould my attitude and morals, inside and out to be a better person. Teacher profession is a noble job and societies look up for it because these people are educating future generation, instilling good values, shaping them becoming a productive and ready to contribute to families, communities and country. Therefore, deep in my heart, I need to change myself to be a better person that has good values so that my actions in future are truly sincere. Last, always be ready to seek for and learn new, good, beneficial knowledge in any circumstances regardless of who delivers the knowledge. As learning is a life-long process and as a future teacher student, I will be exposed with new information from my own students and maybe from that, I can relate it to their daily life. Therefore, the knowledge that both parties are learning would not be such a waste.

In conclusion, I am grateful to have to do this assignment because it is truly an eye and mind opening and really help me to figure what kind of teacher that I want to be.
